UNESCO Criticized In Report

Internal Study Cites Problems Of Management

By Richard Bernstein New York Times Service

PARIS — A group of present and former UNESCO staff members has prepared a report containing sharp criticism of the way the organization is run.
The report charges that the United Vations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization's programs suffer from duplication and overlapping unsatisfactory guid-ance and a failure at top management levels to coordinate activities. The report, "The Critical Analysis of the Program," seems to sup-port some of the criticism of UNESCO's management techniques by the Reagan administra-tion, which announced in December that the United States would withdraw from the organization at the end of this year unless basic changes were made

The study, compiled by 21 pre-sent or former UNESCO officials, was commissioned by the organization's director general, Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal, at a meeting of the 51-member execu-

At that time, Mr. M'Bow commissioned five studies on various aspects of UNESCO, including personnel practices, budget and methods of program evaluation, in compiled by an internal working munism in Central America.

The four reports involving outside experts have been made public but the internal study has not been officially circulated. A copy was made available by sources un-friendly to Mr. M'Bow.

Diplomats who have seen all five documents said Friday that the four studies made public by UNESCO were less critical than the report by the internal group. .

MOSCOW — The removal of Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov from his post as chief of general staff of the Soviet armed forces could indicate a major dispute between the military and the country's Communist Party rulers. Western diplomats said Friday.

leadership that has always been cessful bid for power.

JOHANNESBURG - Bishop Desmond Tutu, a leading South African clergyman, said Friday he ly do have grievance... feared that the violence that swept black townships this past week would spread to other areas.

Bishop Tutu said the South African Council of Churches, of which he is general secretary, had many people were killed or injured in the three days of rioting. The official toll is 31 dead and 50 in-

He blamed rent increases for rents and the quality of black sparking the looting and arson in townships around Sharpeville, 30 miles (48 kilometers) south of Johannesburg. Similar increases were virtually certain in other townships, he said, and this could cause further disturbances.

A magistrate on Friday banned weekend protest meetings in the Johannesburg area, saying they might threaten the public peace. Included in the ban were all gatherings to commemorate the death in detention of a black leader. Steve Biko, seven years ago, those to discuss the deaths of recent riot victims and others to call for the release of detainces.

As Bishop Tutu prepared to meet Cooperation and Development Minister Piet Koornhof in an attempt to resolve grievances in the townships, a three-month-old conflict between gold-mine owners and black miners came to a head. The employers said they had made their final offer on pay to the Na-tional Union of Mineworkers, whose members at five mines are preparing to begin South Africa's first legal strike by black gold min-ers on Sept. 17.

A stoppage could deprive the country of a quarter of its gold production at a time of economic recession. Gold accounts for half of South Africa's earnings.

Bishop Tutu challenged govern-ment allegations that the riots had been orchestrated by unnamed individuals and organizations.

"They really should get away from thinking it is agitators who make people go on the rampage," he said. "Either you are very stupid to agree to be misled by an agitator you will suffer for it — because people have suffered —or you real-

"The underlying resemment that's built up over 40 years is what has been causing people to react in the way that they are reacting. It takes very little to light the powder keg. The tuse is very allors.

Bishop Tutu said he might meet Education Minister Gerrit Viljoen as well as Mr. Koomhof Friday and would raise grievances about schooling. Schools throughout South Africa have faced sporadic boycotts since early this year.

[Officials closed black schools Friday in Johannesburg and Pretoria, a government spokesman said. The Associated Press report-

[Edgar Posselt, spokesman for the Department of Education and Training, said the department de-cided "in the light of events" to close the schools a week before a scheduled holiday was to begin Sept. 14. Nationwide, the department says, there were about 5.6 million blacks in elementary and high schools in 1983, the last year for which data is available.]

AUSTIN. Texas — A collaborative effort by American computer companies, mobilized to head off the Japanese arrack on the high-technology markets of the 1990s, has collete off to a rocky start.

while the consortium, the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., or MCC, is beginning to make process, most of its participants say that in its first 18 months it may vet to usher in the new age of cooperation needed to match Japan's government-sponsored efforts to dominate those markets.

From the first, the participants, who have grown now to 18, including the Eastman Kodak Co. and the Lockheed Corp., made bold promises to fully support the project.

But MCC officials acknowledge that many of the companies have balked at surrendering their best researchers and ideas to a venume that would help their domestic opposition as well as themselves. Some companies reportedly offered incentives to keep their top engineers from joining MCC. But many of the experimental venture's shareholders now say that the worst may be over.

Some of the corporate sponsors complained that, without their own staff members at MCC, they would have trouble transferring technology back to their own laboratories. MCC did not challenge that claim. Instead, "we told them they had only one chance to get their best people in the projects," said George Black, a Radio-Corp. of America executive who is an MCC vice president. "And all of a sudden, we started getting better applicants from the companies." When antitrust problems seemed to threaten MCC, it was

Mr. Inman who obtained a green light from the Justice Department and then lobbied Congress for a bill to ease restraints on research consortiums.

When it became clear that MCC would need the resource of a major research center, it was Mr. Inman who persuaded the University of Texas to speed expansion of its computer sciences department in return for locating MCC in Austin. Finally, it was the former deputy director of Central Intelligence who presided over the sometimes acrimonious debate over exactly which projects MCC should pursue. In doing so, he relied heavily on a former National Security

Labor leaders have publicly eschewed talk of new diplomatic moves or of trading West Bank territory for peace as they have attempted to attract conservative political partners to form a coalition.

 Arab fears have been heightened by the increased parliamentary vote for rightist Jewish extremists, including the unexpected electoral victory of Rabbi Meir Kahane, who ran on a platform advocating forcible expulsion of all Arabs from Israel and the occupied territories.

Arab radicals, who say they never held hope that a Labor-led government would mark a real improvement over the present right-leaning Likud, say that their darkest predictions have been vindicated.

Irish Consul in Amman Shot to Death

DUBLIN (AP) - Ireland's honorary consul in Jordan, who investigated the death of an Irish-born stewardess and the alleged false imprisonment of another, has been found shot to death at his home in Amman, the Irish Foreign Office said Thursday.

Emmanuel Jack Sabella was shot through the head Aug. 29, a spokesman said. He said Amman police were investigating but "there is no indication his murder was linked with his position as honorary consul." Mr. Sabella, a Jerusalem-born insurance agent in his early 50s, had been asked earlier this year by the Foreign Office to investigate the January shooting death of Patricia Harte. 23, in her Amman apartment the spokesman said. She was a stewardess with Alia, the Jordanian national airline. He reported that the shooting was accidental. A man charged by Jordanian police with causing death by a careless act was found guilty and sentenced to three months in prison.

More recently, Mr. Sabella investigated a claim by another Dublin-born Alia stewardess that she was imprisoned in a basement in Amman for 10 months. The woman, who name was withheld, said she was starved and drugged by a man and married to him in a ceremony she could not remember. Her parents brought her back to Ireland after investigations by Irish police and Interpol.

'At no time were the operational installations threatened by the fire," said Colonel Jean-Claude Tavernier. Fire officials said the fire, which broke out Thursday, apparently began in a television set.

Colonel Tavernier's statement said 50 to 60 men were in the four-story barracks 12 miles (19 kilometers) northwest of Paris. Most of the men managed to escape quickly, but one died when he jumped from the building, the statement said. The barracks houses men attached to an underground nuclear control center which in time of war would issue orders to France's air, missile and submarine nuclear forces.

China Invites Hong Kong Delegation

HONG KONG (AP) - The Chinese government has invited Hong Kong officials for the first time to attend the Oct. 1 celebrations in Beijing marking the creation of the People's Republic of China 35 years ago, a government spokesman reported Friday.

The spokesman said the Hong Kong government had accepted the invitation but the composition of the delegation had not been decided. He said the invitation was extended by Xu Jiatun, director of the Hong Kong bureau of Beijing's official Xinhua news agency.

Hong Kong will revert to Chinese sovereignty in 1997 when the British lease on most of the territory expires. Britain and China plan to sign an appropriate on Hong Kong's fitting later this mosth. Buth countries have

Thurmond Defers Decision on Meese

WASHINGTON (AP) - The chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee said Friday that his panel would not consider the nomination of Edwin Meese 3d, a counselor to President Ronald Reagan as attorney general in this session. The decision virtually eliminated any chance that the appointment would be confirmed this year.

Mr. Reagan on Friday recon-firmed his support of Mr. Meese and said he would resubmit the nomination if elected to a second term. A spokesman for Senator Strom Thurmond, a South Caroli-na Republican, said the senator decided against considering Mr. Meese's nomination to avoid making it an election-year political is-

VATICAN CITY (AP) - The Reverend Leonardo Boff, a leading exponent of liberation theology, said Friday after undergoing more than four hours of questioning by Vatican officials that he had not been asked to change his theses.

The Brazilian Franciscan friar appeared at the Vatican, in response to a momons, to defend his book "Church: Charisma and Power," four days after the Vatican condemned Markist elements in liberation theology. He had predicted that the session would result in a "global judgment of our Father Boff expressed relief after the session, directed by Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, the West German prefect of the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith. He said that he apparently would not be questioned further and would receive an assessment by Jan. 1. The Vatican later said that Father Boff's teachings "had created difficulties" but that "the conversation took place in a fraternal atmosphere."

Thousands March in Santiago Protest

SANTIAGO (WP) — Thousands of Chileans marched from the poor neighborhoods of Santiago to its cathedral Friday afternoon to honor a French priest killed in three days of national protests. The government of General Augusto Pinochet reacted with both threats and conciliation. Government officials sought to avoid a confrontation with the Roman Catholic Church over the sbooting of the Reverend André Jarlan. They continued to deny reports by witnesses that Father Jarlan was shot by police, but they also promised church and French Embassy officials a full investigation.

Meanwhile, the authorities dropped initial attempts to halt Friday's march and Mass and lifted censorship imposed Tuesday on two church-supported radio stations. On Thursday, President Pinochet had stid protest organizers would be prosecuted and that police and intelligence service activity would be stepped up for future demonstrations.

Bolivia Accuses Colonel of Coup Plot

LA PAZ (Reuters) — Bolivian officials accused a retired colonel Friday of masterminding a plot by rightist groups to stage a bloody comp this weekend.

Interior Ministry officials said Colonel Rolando Saravia, on the run since he was accused of organizing a brief abduction of President Hemin

Siles Zuazo in June, planned to kill senior government, union and military officials in an attempt to overthrow the democratic government. Military sources said army garrisons in several cities were put on alert after Interior Minister Federico Alvarez Plata said the coup was planned for the weekend. "Groups of recognized fascist identity are getting rapidly organized in this capital and other cities to carry out their smister designs," he said.

New York City, whose five boroughs were joined together in 1898, has been put asunder by the telephone company. Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island have a new area code: 718. Manhattan and the Bronx retain area code 212.

The phone company said the new code was needed because it was running out of numbers. Predictably, there have been complaints. Columnists have portrayed 718 as "tacky," noting that chic places such as Washington (202), Chicago (312) and Los Angeles (213) have low-number codes, while high numbers turn up in northern Kansas (906) and Council Bluffs, Iowa (712)

The idea that a telephone number can convey social sta-tus is not new. Twenty years ago, when telephone exchanges had names, Butterfield 8 was considered New York's most exclusive local exchange. Not coincidentally, John O'Hara made it the title of a novel about Manhattan's rich people. Today, he would have to call his book "288."

Mountains of Food In Miles of Aisles

Vast warehouse stores, at least twice the size of conven-tional supermarkets, are only the most dramatic innovation in the latest wave of change to sweep the retail food industry in the United States.

Products are displayed in open cartons or even in bulk in huge cracker barrels. Prices are low and the stores often are open 24 hours a day. First cousin to the warehouse stores are so-called superstores, offering more service and a larger selection of products.

Yet another variation is the so-called combination store, also aimed at busy consumers who want to do all their buying in one place. They put an even greater emphasis on nonfood items and services such as lunch counters, pharmacies, film processing and liquor sales. After the warehouses, they are the fastest-growing of the industry's new formats.

At the same time, the traditional supermarket is being squeezed from the other side with the proliferation of small gourmet outlets. The trend toward single households and two-income families has increased the demand for huxury items such as truffles and paté, with orices to match.

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives has voted amanimously to approve a bill to make lower-priced generic drugs more widely available, saving consumers an estimated $1 billion over the

The bill also provides the manufacturers of brand-name drugs with increased patent and marketing protection, incentives that the pharmaceutical industry has argued are critical to encourage development of new drugs.

The bill, which passed the Senate in a nearly identical version by a voice vote on Aug. 10, was adopted by the House on Thursday by a vote of 362 to 0. The result of months of negotiations, it had the support of the brand-name phar-maceutical industry, the generic drug industry, consumer and labor groups, and the administration. President Ronald Reagan is expected to sign it.

Provisions of the bill would allow more rapid approval of generic versions of some of the best-selling pharmaceutical products in the country, including the tranquilizer diazepam, marketed as Valium, the diuretic Dyazide, the cardiovascular drug Inderal and the pain reliever ibuprofen, a prescription drug known as Motrin which also is available over the counter as Nuprin and Advil.

At the same time, it would provide up to five more years of patent protection for new brand-name drugs. Drug manufacturers had fought for extension of their 17year patent, arguing that the time consumed in getting regulatory ap-proval to market a drug cut into the period that it could be sold with

"This bill will do more to contain the cost of health care than any-thing the Congress has done this year," said Representative Henry A. Waxman, a California Demo-crat and the principal author of the legislation. "I think this is the most important consumer bill the Congress has adopted this session."

Differences in the House and Senate versions remain to be worked out, but a Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee spokesman said the committee chairman, Senator Orrin G. Hatch, a Utah Republican and the bill's chief sponsor in the Senate, hopes to do so quickly. But the committee spokesman added that Mr. Hatch had not yet seen all the House

"It's none of Nancy Reagan's business," Mr. Sturmer said after Mrs. Reagan offered the advice and some private words of encouragement to his daughter, Sabra, 13.

During a visit Thursday by the First Lady to an elementary school class on drug abuse prevention, Sabra told Mrs. Reagan that her father, who is divorced, smokes marijuana "all the time." Mrs. Reagan later advised Sabra to "stand

In an appearance at William Knight Elementary School, Mrs. Reagan, who is active in programs to fight drug abuse among young people, also took part in a series of skits in which students pretended to be pressuring her to drink or take drugs.

Alzheimer's Disease: New Clue Seen Study Pinpoints Brain Area Responsible for Memory

By Lawrence K. Altman New York Times Service

NEW YORK -- Scientists have pinpointed the damaged areas of the brain that appear responsible for the memory loss linked to Alzheimer's disease, a finding that gives researchers a new way to seek the specific cause of the disease that affects millions of people.

The finding of specific physical defects in the brains of Alzheimer's victims, coupled with a recent dis-covery of chemical abnormalities in Alzheimer-affected brain cells, rep-resent major steps in understanding how the incurable disease The bill would increase the avail- causes progressive memory loss cells is confined to a surprisingly to autopsy studies of five people who died of Alzheimer's disease. The results are reported in the Sept. 14 issue of the journal Science, which was released Thursday. The selective nature of the damage reported by researchers at the University of Iowa is a surprise because most doctors had thought the progressive memory loss had resulted from damage to nerve cells in scattered areas throughout the

The new findings follow another fect in the brains of people who died of Alzheimer's disease. That defect leads to a markedly diminished production of protein in the brain cells, but it was not determined whether the reduced production was a cause or effect of Alzheimer's disease. Nor has it yet been established that the diminished protein is the cause of the anatomical damage,

However, the biochemical and anatomical findings in the two reports are compatible, the head of the Iowa team, Dr. Antonio R. Daers said. The hippocampus is then masio, said in an interview. "We looked at the same problem from different perspectives."

The tests reported in the Science article were performed on autopsied brain tissue from five Afzheimer patients and on five other patients of the same age who did not have the disease. The selective brain detect was not found in the latter group.

"Now, we have to find out why these cells are particularly affected by the disease," Dr. Damasio said. "It's like a tornado that cuts a very narrow path, destroying buildings in a strip 100 yards wide but leaving everything else standing."

The damage was confined to two report, in the Aug. 31 issue of Sci-ence, that found a biochemical de-small area in the temporal lobe toward the front of the brain that is necessary for making and cataloging memories.

Experimental destruction of the hippocampus has been linked to a profound and lasting memory im-pairment that affects all types of learning.

Most damage to the hippocampus was in the entorhinal cortex, an assembling area for information coming into the hippocampus, and the subiculum, another assembling area for data coming out of the isolated from the rest of the brain

Dr. Damasio and his colleagues Dr. Bradley T. Hyman, Dr. Gary W. Van Hoesen and Clifford L. Barnes, added standard chemica to stain brain cells so that detail could be clearly seen under the microscope.

The researchers brought a fresh approach to their anatomical studies: knowledge gained from other experiments of brain function that were done in the last five years.

U.S. Business Group Acknowledges Giving 'Hit List' on 4 Agencies

By David Hoffman and Dale Russakoff Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has ac-knowledged that it provided the holdovers whom the business com-White House in 1981 with a list of "unsympathetic" Carter administration holdovers in the Environmental Protection Agency and three federal departments — Labor, Energy and Justice.

Many of the 18 officials targeted by the chamber were civil servants theoretically protected from political dismissals or demotions. One was later forced out when he refused an undesired transfer, while others said they were pressured to leave or given nothing to do. Still others remain in the government.

The chamber released the list and associated documents after they were demanded by the House Energy and Commerce Committee chairman, Representative John D.
Dingell, Democrat of Michigan, who led last year's congressional investigation of the EPA. One issue in that investigation was whether the administration improperly politicized the agency.

Mr. Dingell said earlier this week that he had evidence that the White House had forwarded a chamber "hit list" to the EPA and sources said he suspected that there were hit lists for other agencies.

The congressman said Thursday that "the hit list of long-term career employees" sent to the White House personnel director by the chamber "raises serious questions of legality." Many of those whose names appeared on the hit list said in inter-views Thursday that they did not know at the time that they had been singled out by the chamber, one of the country's most influential business lobbying groups. Some said they were puzzled about why they were on the list and others said they were pleased.

The list targeted 10 EPA officials, six Labor Department offi-cials, and one each in the Justice and Energy departments.

The documents show that the "hit list" was welcomed at the White House by Wayne H. Valis, who was then an aide to President Ronald Reagan. He sent a copy to Lyn Notziger, the White House political director at the time, writing a covering memo that was made public Thursday;

"There is a great deal of concern on the part of a number of our allies about Carter administration munity feels are unsympathetic." "I certainly hope something can be done about this," Mr. Valis said. He also sent Richard L. Lesher, the chamber's president, a copy of his note with a handwritten notation, "We try to please."

"I'm honored to be an enemy of the Chamber of Commerce," said Anthony Roisman, a former Justice Department lawyer who prosecuted hazardous-waste violations and now heads Trial Lawyers for Public Justice, a firm that brings suits against government and industry. Mr. Roisman, who was singled out for harsh criticism by a chamber official, said he quit the Justice Department in January 1982, when he found that he had no waste cases to prosecute. "I'm really pleased to be in such good company. The people on the list were some of the best in the agency," said Barbara Bankoff, an EPA political appointee who was fired by the former administrator, Anne M. Burford, but rehired after William D. Ruckelshaus took over the agency.

"I think it was pretty stupid of them to put me on the list," said Roy Gamse, former deputy assistant EPA administrator in charge of economic analysis, now director of strategic planning for a private corporation, MCI. "Certainly within the agency I was seen as one of those who was on the side of weigh-ing the economic impacts of regulation, rather than advocating purely the tightening of regulations.

Mr. Lesher sent the list to E. Pendleton James, who was then White House personnel director, in August 1981 after complaining at a luncheon about the Carter officials.

The chamber documents show, as did disclosures in the EPA scandal, the close ties that Reagan administration officials maintained with industry groups. The administration has argued that it has changed its policies substantially since the departure of Mrs. Burford and all but one of her political

Anti-Sandinist Accord

. SAN JOSE, Costa Rica - Two rival Nicaraguan rebel leaders. Eden Pastora Gómez and Alfonso Robelo Callejas, have reached an agreement to cooperate in their fight against the Sandinist government, according to a communiqué released Thursday.

The agreement was signed Wednesday at Mr. Pastora's camp just inside Nicaragua near the San Juan River, a spokesman for Mr. Pastora said.

ganizations represented in the meeting, which took place within a framework of cordiality and mutual respect, will continue to act sepa rately, always keeping in mind that the common enemy is the one that tramples the freedom and basic rights of the Nicaraguan people."

Mr. Pastora's spokesman said the communique meant that the two leaders would maintain separate organizations.

[Mr. Robelo, head of the Costa Rica-based Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, confirmed Thursday that he and Mr. Pastora had agreed to coordinate their operations but act separately, Reuters reported in San Jose.]

Mr. Pastora once was in charge of the group's military operations while Mr. Robelo dealt primarily with political functions. Mr. Pas tora was expelled when he opposed having the group join forces with another rebel organization, the Nicaraguan Democratic Force based in Honduras. Mr. Pastora, who now heads the Sandino Revolutionary Front, op-posed the union because, he said, the Democratic Force receives orders from the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and is made up of former members of the National The communique said: "The or-Guard of Anastasio Somoza, the dictator overthrown in the 1979

Both Mr. Pastora, who was known as Commander Zero, and Mr. Robelo were active in the Sandinist-led revolution. The two men broke with the Sandinists because of the junta's growing ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union. They formed the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance in 1982.

inflation. The stories from Buenos Aires are tary Fund ought not to make special concesbeginning to be similar to those from Germany after World War I. There is the same air of haste bordering on panic, with people snatching up their wages and rushing out to spend them on almost anything before prices rise again. By the time the German hyperinflation reached its climax in late 1923, factory workers were being paid twice a day and a newspaper cost 200 billion marks. The price level was something over a trillion times the 1914 level.

Things have not reached that point yet in Argentina. At least theoretically there is still time for the government to bring inflation under control. But the chances for success are fading as the spiral accelerates. The inflation rate is now around 25 percent a month, which means nearly 1.500 percent a year.

The political reality behind this inflation is the vehement struggle between the government and the Peronist labor movement. When the government came to power less than a year ago it unwisely promised to keep wages rising faster than prices. That initial error underlies its inability to impose restraint. The unions called a one-day general strike last Monday to press claims for still faster wage increases.

In the United States, attention continues to be fixed on Argentina's foreign debts. The Tax cuts and 12-digit budget deficits certainly lit the Keynesian prescription, pouring purchasing power into a weak economy. And Mr. Reagan certainly lowered wage expectations with anti-union policies, dramatized by the firing of striking air controllers. But most of the credit for controlling inflation must go sion that convinced business that the govern-ment was serious about prices. The Fed is still controlling inflation, with tight money to counterbalance the Reagan fiscal stimulus. This mix — the president's fiscal profligacy and the Fed's monetary stringency — is hardly a dependable formula for stable growth. It causes the high interest rates that suck in $100 billion a year in foreign capital that supplements domestic savings, which would otherwise be entirely absorbed in funding the deficit. And the present mix raises the value of the dollar, keeping the prices of imports low. But high interest rates have also placed a crushing burden of debt service on poor countries. And the U.S. economy has been made increasingly vulnerable to the vagaries of international finance. At the very least, an exodus of capital could create a burst of inflation. At worst, it could wreck world trade. Mr. Reagan has talked a lot about supplyside initiatives and cutting government down to size. But he has behaved like a Keynesian pilot with the throttle set at full speed ahead. His overdose of tax cuts, compled with credit austerity from the Fed, did rocket America out of a recession without inflation. The question now is whether Mr. Reagan — or anyone else - can maneuver the economy back to the eround without a crash landing.

A Kremlin Rebuff to Japan

Former Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi's visit to the Soviet Union last week as head of a parliamentary goodwill mission was largely unproductive. If it proved anything, it was the futility of trying to promote friendly relations with that giant Communist neighbor.

During his four-day stay in Moscow, Mr.

Sakurauchi patiently explored ways to improve strained relations. Perhaps he had some reason to expect a better dialogue with Moscow. Earlier. Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko had spoken of a desire to develop Russo-Japanese ties. It is true that, in the absence of a broad agreement between the two superpowers to promote dialogue and work out confidence-building arrangements, as well as nuclear arms control measures, any attempt to improve Tokyo-Moscow relations can only be ineffective, if not useless.

— The Japan Times (Tokyo).

Americans and Foreign Policy

The presidential campaign having just begun, it may be premature to complain about the absence of foreign policy issues from the candidates public discourse. Yet it would be sad if Americans were deprived of an open debate about the policies conducted in their name. For all the gaudiness of an election campaign, and no matter who wins, the very experience of a debate about American actions abroad remains a safeguard for democracy. The most significant difference between Washington's war in Indochina and Moscow's war in Afghanistan is that Americans were able to conduct a public protest against their government. Andrei Sakharov was muzzled and confined to exile in Gorki when he condemned the invasion of Afghanistan.

In his conception and conduct of foreign policy, President Reagan has demonstrated damaging incompetence. Americans are less secure than they were four years ago and they have more cause to be worried about the future. As Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro iourney around the country, they are likely to find out that the American people care very much about the nuclear arms race, Central America and the Middle East.

- The Boston Sunday Globe.

Years of bellicose rhetoric have made a large section of middle-class white Americans highly hawkish. Naturally, the right-wing Republi-cans are expecting to reap a rich harvest of votes. Perhaps the thought behind this belligerent posture is that the Soviet Union, learful of the economic consequences of having to match the Americans, will meekly come to the table and take its medicine. If this is so, it shows that the American president is woefully unaware of Russian attitudes and reactions.

The federation's order came from its president, William Green. # Today's Arms Game Needs Modern Rules

T HE HAGUE — I called the North-South problem embittering (IHT, Sept. 7). In contrast, the East-West problem is challenging. Its solution requires originality.

It is above all else a problem of the two superpowers, whose overarmament policies are influenced only feebly by other countries' policies — as was so clearly stated by Alva Myrdal, former chairman of the UN Disarmament Commission, in The Game of Disarmament: How the United States and Russia Run the Arms Race."

Unfortunately this policy of the superpowers has not contributed to world security but to a high degree of world insecurity. The goal of international policy with the highest priority by far is to stop the armaments race and to reduce armaments. The view of the present U.S. administration that the necessary negotiations should be conducted "from a position of strength" is a fallacy because it is logically impossible for both parties simul-taneously to be in a "position of strength." It is a fallacy also because each superpower's military capacity is one of overkill; both are able to kill the world's population many times over. That the American people elected in 1980 and will probably re-elect a government that wants a "position of strength" may be the consequence of their lack of experience of a war on their territory. NATO's acceptance of this starting point may be due to the lack of experience by Western Europe of a nuclear war. Here only Japan can testify — but its experience must be multiplied by so large a factor for "technical progress" that it fades.

With all the doubts we may have concerning the aims of the Soviet Union, we must understand its suspicion vis-à-vis the United States. America is the only country that has used a nuclear bomb. In addition, most of the qualitative "improvements" in nuclear weapons have been introduced by U.S. forces. To be sure, suspicion in the opposite direc-tion is justified as well: What is the Soviet aim in the Horn of Africa and in Afghanistan?

The fundamental challenge in the problem of the arms race is that we do not yet understand the impact on security of weapons that cannot be used. It is to the medical profession's credit to have made clear to the public that medical aid would not be available after a nuclear attack. In contrast, it is a grave omission on the part of the economics profession that it has not set out the negative economic consequences of warfare.

For too long, economists have regarded war as a subject outside their purview. They should point out that warfare is economically far worse than any sort of bad economic policy. Its impact on human welfare is thousands or millions of times worse than that of an economic depression. If it is a task for the science of economics to set out how best to avoid a depression or lessen its effects, a more important task is to set out how to avoid war. Foonomists should have asked, for a start, why the war phenomenon developed.

Fighting was originally an activity that some people, particularly males, enjoyed. That may still have been true in Europe's Middle Ages, and it applies to some contemporary individuals - for instance, some drunken men or some schoolboys. But, step by step, elements were introduced that have altered the nature of fighting. For lack of volunteers, the organizers of wars as mass activities had to introduce conscription and force other people to join the professional fighters and armed idealists. The ideology that now had to inspire the fighter was nationalism—the theory that one's own nation is always better, abler and especially, nobler than the enemy. (As a result, both sides invoke God's help.) Technological development has introduced types of guns, and carriers such as aircraft, that brought the possibility of killing people you cannot see an increasing proportion being children. Military activities are the best example of an endeavor in which development is not improvement, and in which economies of scale do not increase production and satisfaction but do increase destruction and suffering. We devote a rising share of productive forces to such activities.

Nationalism — the main ideology used to motivate soldiers — is strengthened by the fact that the Earth is populated by so many different peoples with different languages. The simpler people within each nation are especially unable to make themselves understood in another nation, and this creates a feeling of alienation, adding to tensions.

Socialism from the start opposed nationalism and summoned "proletarians of all countries" to unite. But it is significant that Communist leaders, when the Soviet Union was invaded by Hitler's armies, could not inspire their soldiers only by the 'defense of communism." Because most of the soldiers were from peasant families, which were not always so favorably impressed by communism. the leaders also had to use patriotism as a uniting force: Similarly, American soldiers could not be asked to defend capitalism; most of them were workers. So they were summoned to fight authoritanianism — to fight for freedom and democracy. World War II was called the great patriotic war. Patriotism is a virtue when it means loving and, if necessary, defending one's country against aggression. It is not a virtue when it means arrogance, or violence toward other nations. This development of war activities into something spreading mass suffering and unhappiness gradually brought into existence various types of peace movements. Among them are religion-based movements (such as Pax Christi, the international Catholic peace movement, supported also by non-Catholics) and policy-oriented movements (such as the Pacifist Socialist Party in the Netherlands). In some Western countries pacifists are permitted to replace military service with civil service.

Recent developments in nuclear armament have strengthened and expanded these movements. In today's missile debate their role and that of some governments, such as the Danish and Dutch, is misunderstood. As we already have pointed out, a discussion in terms of power equilibrium hardly makes sense: The heart of the matter is that the armaments race must be ended. Because traditional thinking and traditional military policies have not been able to accomplish this, unorthodox thinking and policies are needed. This unorthodox thinking is required of both sides.

How Could KAL 007 Be So Lost?

By Tom Wicker

N EW YORK — The depressing complicity with government into which the free American press has sunk since Vietnam and Watergete has seldom been more visible than it was on the first anniversary, on Sept. 1, of the Soviet destruction of Korean Air Lines flight 007.

American headlines and airwayes, of course, fully reported the Reagan administration's statements that the downing had boosted U.S. standing in the world relative to that of the Soviet Union. But the press effectively ignored an authoritative article in the New York weekly The Nation (dated Aug. 18-25) establishing to a reasonable certainty that numerous agencies of the U.S. government knew or should have known, almost from the moment flight 007 left Alaska, that the plane was off course and headed for intrusion into Soviet airspace above some of the most sensitive Soviet military installations.

No U.S. agency, military or civil-ian, warned the crew or tried to guide it out of danger. Nor did Japan. As recently as Aug. 28, in an anniversary briefing, a State Department spokesman said that "no agency of the U.S. government even knew the plane was off course and was in difficulty until after it was shot down."

If that is true, concludes the author of The Nation's article — David Pearson, an authority on the Defense Department's worldwide military command and control system, who spent a year researching his article—then "the elaborate and complex system of intelligence, warnings and se-curity that the U.S. has built up over decades suffered an unprecedented and mind-boggling breakdown." But Mr. Pearson shows in excreciating detail why it is most unlikely that there was any such "simulta-neous failure of independent intelligence systems" operated by the navy, the army, the air force, the National the army, the air force, the Ivational Security Agency, the CIA or Japan's Self-Defense Agency — all of which, he demonstrates, had the ability to track flight 007 at various stages of its journey across the Pacific.

What is the alternative to the staggering idea of such a breakdown? That all these agencies deliberately chose not to guide the airliner back on a safe course, because its projected overflight of the Kamchatka Peninsula and Sakhalin Island would activate Soviet radar and air defenses and thus yield a "bonanza" of intellito the contrary, the Pearson evidence level of a high probability.

Mr. Pearson does not assert as a fact that the United States or South Korea or both deliberately planned an intelligence mission for flight 007. He concedes the possibility that its crew blundered into sensitive Soviet space, and that electronic onlookers for the United States decided on the spot to take intelligence advan-tage of his error — never dreaming that the Russians would shoot down an unarmed airliner.
But if the disaster happened that way. Mr. Pearson points out, then two experienced pilots (nearly 20,000 flying hours between them) not only made an error in setting the automatic pilot but "sat in their cockpit for five hours, facing the autopilot selec-tor switch directly in front of them at eye level, yet failed to see that it was set improperly." Nor in all that time could they have used any of the radar and other systems available to them to check their course and position. Mr. Pearson presents substantial evidence-that Soviet radar detection and communications systems over Kamchatka and Sakhalin were being jammed that night, which would help account for their documented difficulty in catching up to flight 007. He reconstructs electronic evidence, too, to show that the airliner changed course slightly after passing near a U.S. RC-135 reconnaissance plane.

The jamming and the change of course, as detailed by Mr. Pearson, strongly suggest what he obviously fears — "that KAL 007's intrusion into Soviet airspace, far from being accidental, was well orchestrated," with the Reagan administration, at some level, doing the orchestrating. Even if not, the deliberate silence or the shocking failure — of se not explain what this extended violence would do to the Salvadoran people or their elected peacemaker. Above all, how can Mr. Duarte persuade the Salvadoran military and economic elites to support negotiation and compromise when they are convinced that President Reagan will send troops to crush the revolutionaries? The rich and powerful of El Salvador strongly doubt that the Salvadoran military can ever overcome the guerrillas on the battlefield. They suspect that, given this likely stalemate, the logic of the Reagan policy will lead eventually to intervention by U.S. troops. And, should they bother to support Mr. Duarte's peace program? Visiting Washington as preadent-elect, Mr. Duarte pledged in May: "We shall never ask you to

they reason, if that is the case, why send American troops on Salvadoran soil." He must have been disap-pointed when the Senate failed to approve a bill, aircady passed by the House, that would prohibit sending troops in or over Central America without congressional approval. Unless his pledge is written into U.S. law, he cannot hope to emulate Mr. Alfonsin and Mr. Betancur. Instead of using Mr. Duarte's political strength to pursue dialogue and compromise, Washington is using his democratic credentials to of a failed militaristic policy. The result of this folly can only be his destruction as a political leader.

Without a change of course in Washington, El Salvador risks losing perhaps the only political figure capable of initiating negotiations and guiding the country through the transition from fendalism to modem democracy. How fortunate for Presidents Alfonsin and Betancur that the Reagan administration was too preoccupied in Central America to lend a hand in their countries.

Africa Is in Africa and Spain Should Be in Europe

By William Pfaff

CALA d'OR, Majorca - Span-iards would like an alternative to Europe because the Europeans of the European Community keep dem-onstrating their reluctance to admit Spain. Negotiations in Brussels once again have failed to produce terms on which Spain can join as promised. The planned admission date, Jan. 1, 1986, seems unlikely to be met.

The Spaniards say crossly that they can, after all, do without the Community. They say that they don't need NATO. They say they don't need Europe. But, of course, they do.

A perverse Spanish claim of the past has been that Africa begins at the Pyrenees. The Moors, however, were driven out a very long time ago.

No African destiny for Spain is visible today, as some might like. No Latin American link seems promising. There is no alternative to Europe. Traditionally the Spanish also deny that there is a Spain. They say there are only Castile, Catalonia, Andalusia, the Basque provinces and so on. The Catalonians go on to claim that "Africa begins at the Ebro," a third of the way from Barcelona to Madrid. Catalonia is European, they

With obsolescent industry, it is losing economic leadership to Madrid, and is increasingly sensitive to issues of Catalan linguistic and politi-cal autonomy. Since the Spanish civil war, France has looked on Basque nationalists in France as political exiles deserving protection. Terrorist acts carried out over the border were tolerated both for this reason and as the price for quiet among France's own Basques. The government under François Mitterrand has in the last year begin serious cooperation with Spanish security forces, imposed forced residence in northern France on some Basque activists and expelled others to Latin America. French courts have ruled to extradite some Basques accused of murders in Spain. There has also been a sinister development, the appearance of a Latin American-style death squad which has murdered several Basque activists inside France.

The Basque problem is one of those for which there is no real answer except patience. As with France's Corsicans, the part of the population that wants to break free is both too large to ignore and too small to prevail. Among the Spanish, more-over, there seems little present taste for extremism of any kind. V.S. Pritchett wrote in the 1950s of unusually high proportion of voters cast special ballots, especially in conencies where the intimidation broke in the civil war and its after-math, including what has been de-scribed as the Spanish genius for ex-cess. In the past the Spanish have hated and rejected in succession each of the movements that created modern Europe — in turn the Renaissance, the Reformation, Enlightenment and the French Revolution. But by accepting democracy they turned this history apside down.

Other Europeans greatly agitated themselves over Spanish democracy between 1936 and 1939. For the next 35 years they ostracized Spain be-cause of Franco. Now that Spain has chosen democracy, one might expect Europeans to be pleased. Instead they have found more compelling interest in claims of rival lishing rights, olive oil and the competitive production of undrinkable wine. International Herald Tribune.

ing people to vote played a major role in the recent Colored and Indian elections. Not only an active boycott campaign, but systematic breaking up of election meetings and physical ss-developed communities.

It is therefore not strange that an factor was strong — as for example in Lenasia, where twice as many people voted by special ballot as voted at the polling station on election day. The fact that so many people took special steps to cast their votes and avoided voting in public is a strong indication that participation would have been much higher if intimidation and physical threats had not occurred.

Therefore, the mere fact that a person did not vote does not mean that he or she rejects the new system. Besides, many other factors such as apathy, limited experience in election campaigning and organizational, fi-nancial and logistical problems expeticneed by political parties also played an important role, as you well know in the United States in connection with the black vote. There is another odd feature in the editorial. In the years when the black peoples were progressing constitu-tionally, it was said that the South African government had no answer to the problem of political rights for the Coloreds and Indians. Now that the new constitution makes a dramat-

The more widely distributed an operating system is, the more advantages it offers. This is common knowledge among computer users, and the reason is obvious: it is more worthwhile to generate software for an operating system with many users. And by the same token, a wide range of software gains more users for the operating system.

Freedom to grow

The Siemens operating system BS2000, currently in use in many parts of Europe, not only encourages such a development, but also guarantees any investment made in software products. When an enhancement of computer facilities, or simply an increase in computer power, is made, software investments are only safeguarded if the operating system remains the same. This is the point about BS2000; it covers the full performance range of our state-of-the art 7.500 series of general-purpose computers, a total hardware program of 10 different models, from medium-sized machines for new installations to the very largest ever developed and produced in Europe.

Real efficiency

BS2000 is also widespread because it is efficient. Diebold, the American statistical research organization, has determined that BS2000 generates 40 percent lower operating expenses than other comparable operating systems, whether staff, system maintenance or training costs.

There are currently over 2,600 computer installations running under BS2000 today. A base of this size, with its daily increasing number of users, demonstrates quite clearly that for BS2000 the future is already here.

Locals Skeptical About Reunification And Just Seek 'Neighborly Relations'

Aside from the anomaly of its electricity supply, an arrangement that antedates the postwar division of Germany, Wanfried and Mr. Höll, a 66-year-old former school director, have little to do with East Germany. At first glimpse, this seems strange, since Wanfried is situated on a panhandie that pokes right into East Germany, which en-velops the village and its wheat fields with a metal wall, barbed wire, jeep patrois, watchtowers and Cardinal Slipyi came to Rome in 1963 under a Vatican-Moscow accord after spending 18 years in la-bor camps and under house arrest in the Soviet Union. It was understood that the Vatican had agreed to keep Cardinal Slipyj out of sight for the rest of his life.

In the postwar period, Cardinal Slipyj became a symbol of religious resistance in the Communist bloc, along with Cardinals Stefan Wys-zynski of Poland, Jozsef Mindszenty of Hungary and Josef Beran

After Pope John XXIII won him his surprise release from the Soviet Union, Cardinal Slipyj lived quiet-ly in the Vatican. But he proved to e an awkward guest.

In occasional sermons outside the Vatican he spoke his mind. More than once he referred to his release as "so-called freedom" and yearned for the day that he would be able to return to the Ukraine.

In 1945 Cardinal Slipyj, appointed archbishop of Lyoy the previous year, was arrested along with 10 other Ukrainian bishops on charges of having cooperated with Catholics the German occupiers.

As part of Pope Paul's policy of trying to improve the lot of Communist bloe Catholics through qui-et diplomacy, the Vatican felt it imperative that Cardinal Slipyj keep a low profile.

the six-month British coal strike refused Friday to comment about their talks after acrimonous public exchanges threatened to undermine the negotiations. A spokesman for the National Union of Mineworkers said the talks would take place Sunday at a secret venue, but the two sides would say nothing about them. The silence ends three days of unusual public posturing in which the leader of the miners, Arthur Scargill, and the chairman of the National Coal Board, Ian MacGre-gor, traded insults on television. Three-quarters of Britain's 180,000 miners are on strike over plans to close loss-making pits. Mr. Scargill says only exhausted ones should be closed.

Picket line violence, a regular feature of the dispute, continued in various parts of England, with the police arresting 39 strikers who hrew firecrackers, rocks and paint in attempts to stop colleagues from returning to work.

Meanwhile, the two-week national dock strike, called after nonunion workers unloaded a cargo of imported coal blacked by dockers support of the miners, halted more than one third of Britain's freight traffic other than petrolenm, on Friday.

Coal industry sources held out little hope for the latest talks, the first since July, saving the two sides were as far apart as ever.

Mr. MacGregor and the coal board, backed by the Conservative government, say the loss-making mines are a drain on the economy and a burden on the taxpayer.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has repeatedly re-fused to intervene in the dispute, discussed the strikes Friday with

AN AMBASSADOR OF JAZZ IS HOME TO PLAY

Manipolier VI 05602 US jazz, wearing their tuxedos. There s Bassist Percy Heath, known for his impeccable taste and timing. There is Connie Kay, more a colorist than a timekeeper, perched behind an array of drums. Before him stands Milt Jackson, perhaps the foremost vibes player of his day, looking such, angry, as he plays. And to his right, at the piano, is John Lewis imself, his features fixed in a quizzical half-smile, his fingers tripping effortlessly through his next sophisticated solo.

." After seven years of silence, the Modern Jazz Quartet is back. In the '50s and '60s it made music history as one of the most innovative, widely admired and welltraveled small ensembles around Eperhaps the best," according to Critic Martin Williams). The MJQ substituted a disciplined grace for Member of CFR the staged jam sessions of the day, and it drew excited legions AA: Some AR breeze of converts from classical and contemporary music to hear it Surgery & S. Co. & Gun: blend Bach and bebop into a hard new brand of thinking man's jazz. CAT C & A invest of the As the group's planist and principal composer, John Lewis became a sort of internationally known statesman of style, rarely spending time at his East End Avenue home in New York.

In 1974, when the MJQ called a A A See B A MA Manual to it all, Lewis came back FERROR YEAR ABROL wife, Mirjana, and two children, and to teach at City College's OROUGH COLLEGIAVIS Center for Performing Arts. 'It was long enough. Twenty-two vears of constant travel. It got to n the bandstand they is a long time to do anything." make a sober portrait: Then, at the end of 1981, the MJQ four dignified giants of announced its return under the management of the great bassist Ray Brown

This time, Lewis insists, will be different. "We're not doing the constant traveling anymore, and the pay is better," he says. Still, his schedule seems hectic enough. This summer he traveled to Iceland and later appeared at the Kool Jazz Festival's tribute to Count Basie. Summer also brought the release of Echoes, the MJQ's first album in ten years. Lewis continues to spend his afternoons in the classroom at City College. And for six evenings this month (September 11 to 16), he is also appearing with the MJQ at the Blue Note in Greenwich Village.

Soft-spoken and succinct, placid of countenance and manner, Lewis is more than a little modest for all his time in front of crowds, he is almost painfully shy in person. "I am very shy," Lewis concedes, "but not when I'm performing. I love to perform."

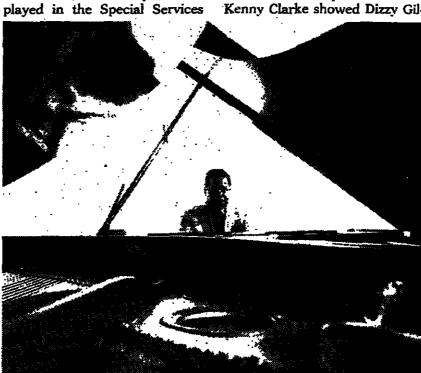

ewis was two months old in 1920 when his family moved from Illinois to New Mexico. His stepfather was an optometrist, and his mother, who died when John was four, sang opera. Lewis' grandmother forced piano on him when he was seven, and though he first tried to escape the lessons, he wound up playing professionally by the age of 12.

By 17, Lewis had his own dance band ("dance band or jazz band, it was all the same then") at the University of New Mexico, where he studied music and anthropolbe too much. Twenty-two years ogy. Then, in his senior year, came ERNATIONAL the bombing of Pearl Harbor. By January he was in the Army for a four-year stint in Europe. "You didn't think much about what you were going to do afterward, because you weren't sure you'd come back," Lewis says. "But I afraid you'd miss something."

After the war Lewis finished his education at the Manhattan School of Music. He also worked in some of the nightclubs on Fifty-second Street. His big break came in January, 1946, when Kenny Clarke showed Dizzy Gil-band, and met Kenny Clarke in an entertainment unit." An innovative drummer, Clarke was helping to create the modern jazz style that came to be known as bebop. He spurred Lewis' ambitions, but the younger man was already thinking that jazz could be something beyond dance music. "I knew it in 1939, when I heard Duke Ellington play at a dance," Lewis says. "His music was too exciting to dance to. You'd be lespie some of the arrangements Lewis had written in the Army. The trumpeter, who was starting a big band, hired Lewis as an arranger; Thelonius Monk was the pianist. When Monk left in July, Lewis replaced him. Gillespie's rhythm section now consisted of Lewis, Clarke, Bassist Ray Brown and the virtuoso vibraphonist from Detroit named Milt Jackson. # PRUNELLE TAKES ON THE BIG LE'S AND LA'S

Tor those who missed the era of the great luxury liners and for those who didn't, but still mourn their decline-a pleasant reminder is waiting on East Fifty-fourth Street in New York in the form of the restaurant Prunelle.

The sophisticated art deco interior might well have been lifted intact from a first-class salon of the old French Line. (In fact it was created last year by New York Designer Sam Lopata.) The sleek, buried maple walls are the color of pale caramel and serve as the backdrop for a glittering mirrored bar, lush carpets, comfortable silk-upholstered chairs and stylized flower arrangements with such 1930s blooms as anthurium and bird of paradise.

No doubt Prunelle's co-owner, Normandy-born Jacky Ruette, revels in this luxurious evocation of maritime grandeur. An accomplished sailor himself, Ruette crossed the Atlantic alone in a 30-foot sailboat in 1979 and once worked for the French Line. (His other abiding passion is skiing, and as the guiding spirit behind the annual International Chef's Ski Race, he has helped to draft Teammates André Soltner of Lutèce, Seppi Renggli of the Four Seasons, Gerard Uhrik of Bistro-Bordeaux, Bernard Herrmann of La Réserve and Michel Fitoussi of 24 Fifth Avenue.) Ruette and his partner, Chef Pascal Dirringer, are familiar to East Siders for their other restaurant, La Petite Marmite.

After almost a year Prunelle is still just teetering on the edge of wonderful. If the menu lacks a bit in wild innovation, it is also blessedly free of culinary cliches: the goat cheese stays on the cheese tray instead of turning up in all the other courses. And if there's any fault in the preparation, it stems more from timidity than excess: a generous, rosy circle of "Pâté Alsacien aux Trois Fois," bordered with aspic and garnished with haricots verts, was served too cold for its flavor to emerge; perfectly cooked Hawaiian prawns were beautifully presented in a basil butter sauce but lacked the flavor of the herb: a thin fillet of salmon with mustard sauce could have used a tad more zip; a vegetable tart was, again, perfectly made but rather bland.

Of course the good side of timidity is restraint, and along with its superb technique and fine ingredients Prunelle has a wonderfully light hand with sauces-and with portion size as well. Among its total successes: excellent lamb; an haricots verts salad-the beans precisely cooked-in a balanced and subtle shallot vinaigrette: a grilled chicken with an unobtrusive raspberry vinegar sauce; irresistible shoestring potatoes; a classic confit of duck with fragrant herbs, crisp skin and no fat. The menu changes twice a year and is supplemented by at least two daily specials—one meat, one fish. The duck confit and a cheese soufflé-the two most popular dishes-are always available, even though they don't appear on the spring/summer carte.

All desserts, as well as the good bread, are made in Prunelle's kitchens and manage to avoid contrived silliness. Ruette and Dirringer offer, instead, homey Please turn page gastronomy—are all adept at the sort of attention that has generally gone the way of the 15-cent bus ride. Occasional lapses—a wrong appetizer on a fairly quiet night, a wine list that didn't appear until it was asked for twice—are all the more noticeable because they are so rare.

Ruette and Dirringer are challenging New York's best French restaurants.

cart, something many restaurants—even top-class ones—will not attempt, as it involves meticulous care and more than a little loss of revenue. Prunelle's cart offers an excellent selection.

The wine list tends heavily toward very expensive French vintages, although there is an adequate choice of bottles priced around $20.00. The house wine is good, and available at $14.00 a carafe or by the glass at $4.50. Ruette says he used to have more than the current five California offerings, but his domestic wines were bought mainly by French visitors. He claims that the demand for domestic wines has fallen off now that the franc is not favoring French travel here.

As to Prunelle's service, no transatlantic sybarite being cosseted in a deck chair at bouillon time ever had it better. The staff—captains and waiters alike, many of them recognizable from their previous posts in some of the other midtown bastions of French

At this moment Prunelle is a restaurant with so much going for it that one wants it to be consistently terrific. Furthermore, with a fixed price luncheon of $26.00, a dinner tab of $42.00, and hefty supplements for caviar, smoked salmon, dessert souffles and the like, it should be terrific.

Ruette says he opened Prunelle because, as much as he loves La Petite Marmite, "it is like being in a corner." He freely admits that he wants to prove he's as good as his midtown neighbors and friends. Well, it takes the nerve of a downhill racer and the determination of a solo sailor to challenge the big French boys—the La's and Le's—on their own turf. But when you think about it that way, Jacky Ruette, with the help of his confrère Pascal Dirringer, may be just the man for the job.

to excited cries: the best, the greatest, the finest, the richest, the neatest, the keenest, the best. Weston Naef likes the word extraordinary. Extraordinary museum, he says.

Extraordinary collection. Extraordinary good fortune that he has. landed the job as its curator. After 14 years directing the Metropolitan Museum's department of prints and photographs, Naef has packed up his family, found a house in California and snatched up the Getty's offer. "Think," he says with a spiritual gleam in his eve, "how many people are ever asked to do something like this."

the world. The whispers gave way

Naef is a cool, professorial man with sandy hair, glasses, and a grin he tries to hide. "When I was informed," he says conspiratorially, "of the scope of this undertaking, I could see it would rank with the most important eventsnot just in the history of photography but in the history of modem museology." Naef says he can find little to compare it to. "You'd almost have to go back to the · 17th century," he muses happily, when Louis XIV asked Cardinal Mazarin to gather all the pictures in the realm." The Getty's, in short, was not an offer that Naef felt he could refuse-despite his ties to the Met. "New York is my home," he says a bi wistfully. "And the people at the Met are my closest friends and most respected colleagues. The is my bosom. To think of learing was not easy at all. It is a wonderful, wonderful place, and why one gives up something like this can't really be answered ratichally. But I think it goes beyond temples: one wishes to be able to wirk with something that is beyand being simply a symbol." Nief also puts it another way: "h just one hour," he says, "John Walsh [director of the Getty] spent nore on acquisitions than I spent i 14 years at the Met."

or months it was only a The collection purchased in that whisper. A lot of closed-door heady hour is actually nine primeetings. A lot of secret vate collections combined. It inphone calls. A lot of self-restraint cludes the 4,000 prints gathered on the part of the few people by Arnold Crane in Chicago and who knew. Then the Getty Muthe 6,500 gathered by Sam Wagseum broke the silence with a staff in New York. It will feature bang. For a rumored $20 million the largest selection of Nadar vinit had bought more than 18,000 tage prints in the world, more Juphotographs of major historic lia Margaret Camerons than any importance. der's work that rivals the National Gallery's. But those are just the major highlights; the minor ones would make any museum curator gloat: Man Ray, Paul Wolff, László Moholy-Nagy, Walker Evans, Hippolyte: Bayard, Sir David Brewster. To put it into perspective, the size of the Getty's new collection is roughly ten times that of the Metropolitan's or the Museum of Modern Art's. As Naef explains it. "The Met has Stieglitz. The Modern has Atget. And the difference between the Met, the Modern and the Getty will be that at its inception the Getty will have five or six collections that are equal to the single strengths of the Modern and the Met." Naef grins. "Which is rather extraordinary."

But of course it's not just the pictures themselves that have inspired the talk. Equally stunning was the Getty's decision to assemble the works at all. For a museum suspected of being as conservative as it is wealthy, photography was a surprising choice. As Naef explains it: "I think they probably found out that there are not many areas where you can come in and start collecting from scratch and hope to equal the major collections that already exist." Photography, he points out, has only been collected systematically for a decade or so. Before that art lovers bought plenty of pictures but weren't convinced of their lasting value.

Naef, for one, never had a doubt. "Collective tastes and opinions that suddenly blow upon us have never been particularly reliable measuring sticks for longterm meaning," he says. "So I never personally took much stock in the doubts about the field when they were there. I was mildly amused that this attitude had begun to set in, but as far as was concerned, I knew that these works would continue to hold magic and meaning for a long time to come." How much all this will affect the photography market is another matter. The Getty purchase clearly gives the field a fresh glow of legitimacy. But according to New York Dealer Daniel Wolf, who single-handedly assembled the various collections, it's doubtful that prices will be dramatically affected. "When people are confident," he explains, "the mood changes, and there'll be more money in the field. But it won't really change the market. You need two big buyers to change a market, and the Getty won't even be one of them. There's very little it needs to add. Weston is going to have his hands full."

Teston Naef became curator of prints and photographs at the Met in 1970. Previously he had been a visiting scholar at the Boston Public Library, and director of the art gallery at Wheaton College. He received his B.A. from Claremont Men's College in 1964, his M.A. from Ohio State University two years later. He did postgraduate work at Brown in art history for the next three years. In the last decade he has written a number of books on photography, including The Collection of Alfred Stieglitz. Unlike many of his colleagues, Naef never wanted to be an artist himself. "I knew I was very good at looking," he says. "And much better at looking than at making. I knew that right from the start."

Daniel Wolf believes that Naef is the only man with the talent and energy to take on the Getty project. The next months will certainly demand both. First, there'll be loose ends to tie up at the Met-not least of which is Naef's own role in helping choose his successor. Next comes the gathering of the Getty's new pictures from around the world. Naef will continue to look for acquisitions, though obviously with great discernment. He will not be purchasing contemporary works, but he does hope to establish ties with the Los Angeles County Museum of Art down the road. He is also determined to begin lending works as soon as possible. "We want this collection to be seen."

Is he daunted? "Not a bit," he says. 'I feel like the kid who dreams of the circus and finally runs away with it."

of Lewis' own voice. Clarke eventually moved on and was replaced by Connie Kay, but that was the quartet's only change in personnel. During the MJQ's first 22 years, Lewis wrote one of the best-known standards in jazz, "Django," in homage to the late gypsy guitarist Django Reinhardt. He wrote a suite called The Comedy based on the characters of commedia dell' arte: rich arrangements of works as varied as "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen" (retitled "England's Carol"), Bach chorales, pop standards, jazz classics and Gershwin's Porgy and Bess, double quartet music for the MJQ and the Beaux Arts String Quartet; collaborations with many jazz soloists, including Sonny Rollins; and the deeply moving In Memoriam, dedicated to one of Lewis' instructors at the University of New Mexico.

Next month Lewis will conduct In Memoriam in Yugoslavia. Meantime, he is completing his reworking of The Well-Tempered Clavier, which combines straight Bach with improvised preludes. On a usual day he practices at home. then heads to a studio to record his compositions. Outside in the quiet of a late summer day, he strolls down East End Avenue unrecognized but observed, and he seems, to anyone who passes by, supremely, privately, at peace

Poor U.S. Trade Results Boost Protectionist Drive

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service

EW YORK - The dollar climbed again this week, smashing past records. According to Morgan Guaranty Trust, the dollar is nearly 26 percent above its average market rate between 1980 and 1982. In July the United States set another record — it ran a trade deficit of $14.1 billion, the highest monthly figure in history. The record dollar and the record trade deficit are no coincidence; the first aggravated the second.

The slumping U.S. trade performance is intensifying protectionist pressures, and threatening to disrupt the world trading system. To be sure, the protectionist wave is by no means limited to the United States. After the successful completion of the Tokyo Round of trade negoti-ations in 1979, the world was hit by the second oil shock and deep recession that raised unemployment to 30 million in the Western industrial countries. World trade slumped, and nations that had pledged themselves to move toward more open trading relations began to move the other way. As Jeffrey J. Schott, a former U.S. Treasury official, puts it: "Despite annual pronouncements in support of open markets, all of the world's major trading countries unabashedly have clamped down against import competition. Autos, steel and textiles head a long list of industries that have successfully sought import re-straints in a multitude of countries in the five years since the end of the Tokyo Round."

"Let industries solve their underlying problems, which are not imports."

Their protectionist actions have also been applied to the debtridden developing countries, thereby worsening the threat to the international financial system. A new study prepared by Mr. Schott for the Council on U.S. International Trade Policy, a nonpartisan research group, notes that 30 to 40 percent of the exports of non-oil-producing developing countries have been subjected to import restraints.

ITHOUT export growth, the developing countries will be unable to earn enough foreign exchange to service their international loans, and this has meant a continuing danger not only to the banks but also to U.S. businesses that depend heavily on developing countries as markets.

The Schott study notes that U.S. exports to the two largest debtor countries, Brazil and Mexico, have fallen by almost 50 percent since 1981, representing 30 percent of the total decline in U.S. exports during this period. Both countries were forced to restrict imports severely because of a lack of foreign exchange, and the lost exports to Brazil and Mexico alone have cost the United States are estimated 250 000 inherity. United States an estimated 250,000 jobs.

The advocates of foreign trade—including not just economists but businesses concerned about their loss of markets and climbing costs—argue that protectionism is a bad answer, a selfdefeating answer, to trade problems.

"The medicine is wrong," Doreen L. Brown, president of Consumers for World Trade, a Washington-based free-trade organization, said in an interview Wednesday. "Let industries solve their underlying problems, which are not imports. Let them cooperate on research. Let them produce more effectively. Meantime, government has a responsibility toward the unemployed workers, to improve worker training and relocation. But what industry does not need is a crutch."

Mrs. Brown notes that protection for the troubled steel industry is nothing new, and has done the industry no good. "Protection of steel goes back all the way to 1967," she says. She contends that the best way to help the steel industry is to stop protecting it

A large body of U.S. industrial and farm groups, including the American Soybean Association, Caterpillar Tractor Co., the Construction Industry Manufacturers Association, the National Grange and the Retail Industries Trade Action Coalition, spoke out this week against the recommendation of the International

Barlow Makes Bid For Bibby

Offer Is Valued At $358 Million

By Lynne Curry International Herald Tribune LONDON — Barlow Rand Ltd., South Africa's largest industrial company, has made a £280-million ($358-million) takeover bid for J. Bibby & Sons PLC, an animal feed

In turn, Barlow Rand will sell to Bibby its U.K. subsidiary, Thomas Barlow Holdings Ltd., for £50 mil-lion in cash and shares. That sale is conditional upon Barlow obtaining 50 percent of Bibby. TBH is in-volved in the distribution of mechanical and automatic handling Bibby's shares opened Friday at 293 pence and fell slightly to close at 288 pence. This followed a steep rise from 228 pence in late August when the news of Barlow's approach was first amounced.

"It's a knock-out bid and a good acquisition, albeit an expensive one," Anthony Richardson, an institutional salesman at Rowe & Pitman, said. Barlow is paying the equivalent of 20 times Bibby's earnings last year, he said.

David Crowe, an analyst at Scott, Goff, Layton & Co., noted that the bid reflects the gradual trend among South African companies to diversify outside of the country.

In addition, Tiger Oats & National Milling Co., in which Barlow owns a 30-percent interest, has a 29-percent stake in Bibby. Mike Rosholt, chairman of Barlow, said Tiger Oat's share and its willingness to be paid in South African rand were an additional incentive to take over Bibby.

Mr. Rosholt said Barlow would use Bibby as a springboard for further acquisitions in industry instead of agriculture, probably in the United States and Britain.

Under the terms of the agree ment, Barlow has already paid about £80 million to Tiger Oats in rand for its 29-percent share. This is 300 pence a share. Upon the sale by Bibby directors and relatives of their shares, Barlow's holdings will be about 34 percent.

Barlow plans to raise an additional £90 million for its ourchase by placing shares in the market. to operate in Sweden have been For every 100 Bibby shares, Barlow welcomed by foreign bank reprewill pay £211.80 in cash and 18 sentatives. Sweden is the last non-ordinary shares of 10 South African cents each in Barlow. Under this offer, each Bibby share is valued at 310.80 pence.

Barlow's interests include food. sugar, textiles, mining paper, pack-aging and appliances. In the six months ended March 31, the company had pretax profits of 392.7 million rand ($250 million).

Bibby, whose main business is agriculture, has diversified into laboratory glassware, hospital supplies, specialty papers and industri

Steel Firm Pulls Out of Creusot Plan

PARIS — The company named to operate a revived Crensot-Loire beavy engineering company as part of a rescue program said Friday it was withdrawing because the plan had insufficient support.

The privately owned steel com-pany, Fives-Lille, said that under the current terms the program would be destined for failure and risk compromising the interests of Fives-Lille's shareholders and em-

The plan envisaged setting up a new company to take over the as-sets of Creusot-Loire, which went into receivership last June, and axing as many as 2,800 jobs. The government would provide nearly 3.5 billion francs ($385 million) in

Fives-Lille said the plan, put to-gether late last month by a consor-tium of industrial and banking interests, had been compromised by its failure to find sufficient support among Creusot-Loire's employees and particularly its managers.

There have been widespread protests against the plan in Creusot-Loire's main center, the small town of Le Crensot near France's second-largest city, Lyon. The town hall has been occupied and even the French Democratic Labor Federation, a trade union normally close to France's Socialist government, has attacked the proposals. Fives-Lille and Framatome, a nuclear-reactor builder hitherto owned by Creusot-Loire, would have been the main shareholders in the new company.

An Encore by GEC Chief Is Awaited Some See New Takeovers

As Funds Top $2 Billion

By Barnaby J. Feder New York Times Service LONDON - Once you have changed the face of British industry, it's hard to find an appropriate

Nonetheless, there are plenty of people in the City of London and the financial community worldwide waiting for Arnold Weinstock's next

Lord Weinstock, a tailor's son whose business success got him knighted in 1970 and made a baron 10 years later, masterminded the overhaul of Britain's General Electric Co., building it into the unmatched giant of the British electrical engineer-ing industry. Since Lord Weinstock became managing director of the faltering company in 1963, GEC has not only absorbed two large rivals, but has become an envied and imitated model of

"He probably influenced Britain more than any other single businessman, not just by restructuring its chaotic electrical industry, but by providing a model for financial discipline and decentralization which others followed," observed Anthony Sampson two years ago in "The Changing Anatomy of Britain," his portrait of the nation.

So what's next? Well, some expect a new round of takeovers. Lord Weinstock's soaring profits and his careful acquisitions and investment policy have left GEC with an accumulation of cash reserves of more than $2 billion in the fiscal year ended last

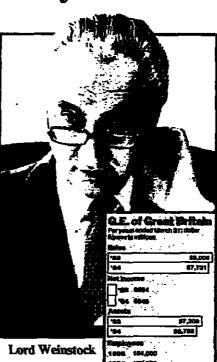

But Lord Weinstock, 60, is annoyed by all this speculation: "People think that you aren't doing anything unless you are buying something." he said in a recent telephone interview from his country home in Wiltshire, 100 miles (160 kilometers) west of London. "I see GEC as put together now. We have to secure growth. We also have to find a judicious mixture of prudence and boldness."

Desprise all Lond Weinsteld metastations. The

Despite all Lord Weinstock's protestations. The Times of London has described the question of when GEC will do something dramatic with its cash hoard as "one of the longest-running enigmas in the City."

Indeed, speculation in the City over Lord Wein-stock's next move has been dampened only slightly by the news that GEC will seek its shareholders' permission at the annual meeting next Friday to spend as much as half its reserves on a sharerepurchase plan, an investment strategy that has rarely been used here since changes in the tax laws in 1981 made it possible.

Lord Weinstock is still quite willing to throw GEC's weight around. That much was demonstrated in late May after Thom-EMI PLC announced that it hoped to merge with British Aerospace PLC, an aircraft and defense-equipment maker that is one of GEC's largest customers. Lord Weinstock responded by starting his own merger talks, confronting Thorn, a consumer-electronies and entertainment company, with the prospect of a bidding war with GEC. To no one's surprise, Thorn decided to drop the whole idea as soon as British Aerospace formally said it was not interested. And by the end of June, talk of a GEC bid for British Aerospace had also evaporated.

"Arnold Weinstock has a financial mind, but he's got that something extra you might call flair," said Lord Carrington, the former foreign minister who was GEC's chairman for a year before leaving in May to become the new secretary general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. "His mind works in an original, exhilarating way."

Indeed, Lord Weinstock's flair, and the story of his rise at the company, have become the stuff of British management legends. Raised by his elder brother after his parents died, he entered the London School of Economics at the age of 16, graduat-

Unemployment In U.S. Steady at 7.5% in August

By Jane Seaberry

Washington Past Service
WASHINGTON — The U.S. cimonth remained at 7.5 percent of the work force for the second consecutive month, the Labor Department reported Friday as what the Reagan administration calls "America's great job machine" appeared to be slowing down. The number of employed in August dropped 425,000, the department said, according to its survey of around 60,000 randomly selected households. However, another, usually more reliable, measure of employment, a survey of business payrolls that is not used in computing the employment rate, showed small job gains of 159,000 last

The unchanged rate in August followed a sharp drop in the unemployment rate in June from 7.5 percent to 7.1 percent and then an equal rise back to 7.5 percent in July, the rate in effect when Presi-dent Ronald Reagan took office.

The White House, which during the election campaign has touted the economy's record-breaking growth, said the unemployment figures were "encouraging" because they stayed stable.

The Reagan administration and many private economists have said they hoped the economy would slow somewhat from its frenetic pace during the beginning of the year to ensure that inflation would not accelerate and cut short the expansion.

Labor Department economists last month said that the sharp rise in unemployment in July could have been due to problems in ad-justing the numbers for seasonal changes in employment patterns. On Friday, the Labor Depart-

Janet L. Norwood, commission, vilian unemployment rate last er of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. said that the employment survey was taken later than usual this year, taking into account a larger than usual number of students who left iobs and returned to school.

However, she also said that it seemed clear that the economy was slowing down. "The unemploy-ment data for August, when taken together with those for July, suggest that employment growth has moderated from the rapid pace reg-istered earlier in the recovery," she

Andrew Brimmer, an economist, said that the level of employment gains "seems to have stopped, by he household data." However, he added that blacks gained 185,000 jobs last mouth. Traditionally, blacks are the last hired in an exmonthly job gains.

The number of unemployed remained virtually unchanged last month from the 8.5-million level in July and in May.

Jobless rates for most major working groups were essentially unchanged, the Labor Department said. The rate for adult men de-clined from 6.5 percent to 6.4 percent, that for women rose from 6.9 percent to 7.1 percent and the rate for teenagers rose from 18.3 per-cent to 18.4 percent. The unemployment rate for whites was 6.4 percent, and for Hispanics 10.7 percent, unchanged from July. The rate for blacks edged down to 16 percent from

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan's refusal to restrict copper imports has brought warnings that foreign competition could imperil the U.S. copper industry and prompted one congressmen to charge he was betrayed by the time that a bank had resorted to private insurance to protect itself On Thursday, the U.S. trade representative, William E. Brock, said the president refused to restrict imports of copper because four times as many U.S. jobs would be at risk than would be saved. The decision was a rejection of a recommen-dation by the U.S. International Trade Commission. Senator Dennis DeConcini, a Democrat of Arizona, whose state includes many copper mines, said, "This is a disaster for the copper industry, and I personally feel betrayed." He said the White House chief of staff, James A. Baker 3d, had promised that he would have an opportunity to talk with the president before any decision was made. "I did not get that chance — they did not keep their word."

Representative Robert W. Davis, Republican of Michigan, said he will introduce a resolution next week in Congress that would implement the ITC's recommendation. He said the Trade Act of 1974 allows such a week.

NEW YORK - Despite some favorable interest-rate and economic news developments, the steel market skidded in sluggish trading Felday in digra disappointing post-Labor Day

Brotters said a large institutional selling program distributed an early rally as investors pulled their bids even though the bond market was staging a rally. Blue-chip issues were hard hit and failed to recover as some had hoped.

The Poer Innes industrial average, up 6 The Dow Jones industrial average, up 6 points at the outset after rising 9.83 Thursday, shed 11.48 to 1,207.38. The average surrendered

17 points for the week overall. Declines led advances 874 to 611 among the 1,942 issues fraded. Volume totaled 84.1 million bares, down from 91.9 million traded Thursday.

Many investors were disturbed the market failed to follow through on Thursday's rally and several analysts were uncertain what the action was saying about the future.

Prices jumped at the outset when bonds rallied on the Federal Reserve's report late Thursday of a $700-million decline in the narrowest measure of the U.S. money supply, which should take pressure off interest rates.

Federal funds rates, which banks charge one another for overnight loans, dropped to 11 9/16 percent from 11 11/16 percent Thursday and 11% percent earlier this week.

Some analysts said the Fed was trying to make it clear to the marketplace that it was not trying to keep the federal funds rates high.

The government's report that the nation's jobless rate remained unchanged at 7.5 percent in August led some investors to feel the economy is slowing down, which would allow interest es to ease. Others were not certain.

Middle South Utilities was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off ½ to 11½ with blocks of 1.8 million shares trading at 11½ and 1.8 million shares at 10%. The stock fell 1½ Thursday on reports the utility might have trouble financing the completion of its Grand Gulf nuclear power Pacific Gas & Electric was second on the list, off ¼ to 14½ with a block of 605,100 shares at 14½. Federal National Mortgage, a ½ winner Thursday, was third, up % to 13%.

Blue-chip Eastman Kodak was fourth on the list, off 1½ to 74%. IBM fell 1¾ to 121% and AT&T, ¼ to 18%.

AT&T, ¼ to 18%.

Gould Inc. was fifth on the list, off 1½ to 26½. The stock fell 2½ Thursday on reports Gould told some analysts that sales of computer chips at its semiconductor unit were weak.

Tektronix, which reported first-quarter earnings of 92 cents a share compared with 71 cents a year ago, plunged 7½ to 57½. Analysts said the earnings were lower than expected. Tektronix said the analysts were unrealistic.

work as an administrative official in the Admiralty.

He honed his financial skills working for a London property de-beloper from 1947 until 1954, when his father-in-law, Michael Sobell, asked him to manage a television manufacturing operation. The teleision company, Radio & Allied Holdings, grew steadily while others stumbled. By 1961, it attracted a takeover bid from GEC that left Mr. Sobell and his son-in-law with à 14-percent stake in GEC and pot the young Mr. Weinstock on GEC's board of directors.

GEC was typical of the English electric companies that were to fail, by the dozens, in the early sixties. But after a two-year power strug-gle, Lord Weinstock was invited to become managing director, and turned the company around, slashing overhead and dividing the company into 53 operating units. From 1962 to 1967, sales rose by 33 per-cent, and profit jumped by 262 per-

During the days in which Arnold Weinstock was laying the founda-tions for today's GEC, he described himself as a man on a crusade. Lord Weinstock today dismisses such language as "too romantic."

"He has been surprisingly con-sistent in his approach and his dedication to it," said Lord Nelson, who joined the GEC board and became chairman after GEC took over English Electric Co., which Lord Nelson headed, in 1958.

For all the attention it commands in Britain, Lord Weinstock's corporate empire is modest-sized compared with others in the international electrical engineering industry, including General Elec-tric Co. of the United States (no relation to GEC) and Westing-house Corp., Germany's Siemens, Sweden's ASEA, and Japan's Mitsubishi, Toshiba and Hitachi. GEC's pretax profits were about $885 million on sales of $7.4 billion in the year ended March 31.

Investors' Group

United Press Interna SEATTLE - The board of Pay 'n Save Corp., Washington's largest retail chain, agreed Friday to sell the company for $355-million to a group of investors led by New York-based Trump Group.

The agreement will be based on a tender offer of at least 51 percent of Pay 'n Save's shares outstanding at $22.50 a share. The offer is expected to begin in the next few days.

Julius and Edmond Trump led the group offering to buy the com-pany. The proposed buyers also in-clude Lamont Bean, 59, Pay'n Save's chief executive officer; E. Ronald Erickson, 53, chief operating officer, and Calvin Hendricks, 51, chief financial officer.

Trump Group has refused to divulge the makeup and purpose of the company. The group has made several unsuccessful to buy several retailers, including Marshall Field

Lufthansa Says Revenue Rises

COLOGNE - Lufthansa West Germany's national airline, reported Friday a 17-percent increase in revenue on flight operations in the first half of the year to 4.17 million Deutsche marks ($1.42 million) from 3.57 million DM a year carlier.

Revenue on cargo operations jumped 28 percent to 956,000 DM from 746,000 a year earlier. Cargo was up 18 percent to 256,404 tons, from 216,802. Sales of passenger flights were up 14 percent to 3.13 million DM from 2.75 million, and the number of passengers rose 6 percent to 11,252.

Lufthansa said it expects to show a profit at the end of this year after increasing profit 40 percent last year to 63 million DM from 45 million. The airline, which is 74-percent owned by the government, increased its dividend as reported on ordinary and preference shares to 3.50 DM from 2.50 DM a year

"Ohio Town" is a more successful book than "Ladies." A nonfiction account of a small Ohio town in the early part of the century, it is told from the viewpoint of a child and through the references of a woman who chose to remain there. The town is, of course, Santmyer's home. Xenia, a town distinguished in recent years only by fate, in the form of a

Her chapter on the East End, the black side of town, is an odd mixture of good scenes and people —some of the best people in the book —and a hint of some of the smoky, hidden life there, but also a naiveté that will likely have her pronounced racist. In observing her East End, Santmyer is always affectionate, yet the reader is constantly aware of her position of privilege.

It is this quality of a rather innocent woman-child watching that informs Santmyer's memoir. Her good scenes are visible through a certain calm air, over distance, the way hot weather produces mi-rages down country roads. She writes of "when nothing moved in the length and breadth of the sunblazing streets, and only a few persons were to be seen in open shop doors or on the benches under the elms; when the trees themselves were limp, unstirring; when the tiled roof was red-hot against the sky, and the hands of the clock in the tower stood motionless at ten to three." And we wish for the shade of elms and arbor-covered porches.

In Harlan's town just south of Xenia, and sometime around the time of the Depression, a young country schoolteacher named Roz McPherson went to the hotel there to meet Sinclair Lewis. Lewis, the disparager of Main Streets everywhere, was touring the Midwest with a play of his, and Main Street was in a retributive mood. McPherson waited until the great man finished breakfast and, as he arose, she said, "Good morning, Mr. Lewis."

"Shut up," he replied, and, as McPherson would succinctly put it later, "That was how I met Sinclair Lewis."

It is not likely that Lewis played Xenia, for I believe that the opera house was already gone, but if he had, he might have met that other young school-teacher, Santmyer, and he might have gracelessly told her the same thing.

Santmyer, however, being a "lady," would not have replied. She would have done just what she did: write "Ohio Town." Although some think otherwise, Lewis never wrote a great book about the midwestern small town. He did not even write a product one Sontware has professed as the interest. modest one. Santmyer has written one that is modest, as she berself is, and for nonfiction these days, a small accomplishment is fine.

John Baskin is a senior editor at Ohio magazine. He wrote this review for The Washington Post.

onslaught of it she has been plucky and funny, her head unturned.

tornado that devastated the heart of it.

She writes about the town institutions — church. library, opera house, school - and her language is decorous, measured, and somewhat distant. It is as though one institution were writing about another, which is understandable for she, herself, has become one of the town institutions.

While her book requires patience, Santmyer is a better journalist than novelist, and there are good, clear scenes that bring the fallow stretches to life. There is a chapter on the railroad, which ran down Xenia's principal street only feet from the opera house, where the locals fit the train's passing into the onstage drama, and through the detail in Santmyer's observation and emotion, it becomes a good essay about the power of the train on the imagina-of her in the company of those good folk like Harlan, who struggled with their time and geography without much hope of reward or readership.

Riggs Keeping Falcons' Spirits High As Team Prepares to Play the Lions Steelers Hold Off Jets, 23-17

By Michael Janofsky
New York Times Service
NEW YORK — The following games will be played this week in the National Football League (Odds are from Harrah's Reno Race & Sports Book):

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Detroit Lions (0-1) at Atlanta Falcons (1-0) — Gerald Riggs used to be mystified that the Atlanta Falcons had ever bothered to draft him at all. By the end of the 1981 season, William Andrews had already run for more than 3.600 yards and Lynn Cain for more than 1,700, both in just three seasons. The last position that seemed to rovement was running

Nonetheless, the Falcons used their first-round pick of 1982 on Riggs, a tailback-type runner at 6 feet 1 inch and 230 pounds who had played fullback at Arizona State. No one was more surprised

If the Falcons had a need for him then, it hardly showed. He carried 78 times for 299 yards as a rookie in the strike-shortened season and 100 times for 437 yards last year, when Dan Henning, the new head coach, put in a one-back offense that primarily featured Andrews. But when Andrews damaged his mee so severely in the recent training camp that he was lost for the season, Riggs replaced him. And all he did last Sunday, when the Falcons defeated the New Orleans Saints, 36-28, was carry 35 times, gain 202 yards — each a team record - and score two touchdowns.

The results were hardly surprising to Riggs. He always thought he had the ability; the problem was finding the time to prove it. He was particularly distressed when Henning took over last year, because one of the coach's first priorities was to redesign the offense, which meant bad news for Riggs and shots by his opponent. "The other matches I felt I could stay back for one-back, it went through my head 10 or 12 shots," Lloyd said, "but he that maybe I wouldn't fit in or maybe I couldn't adjust to the new system," Riggs said. "Once I talked to Henning about it, I concluded that I should settle down, learn the system and be patient.' The way it turned out, Henning may have been right. Riggs ran like a rookie against the Saints and felt no ill effects as he practiced for the Falcons' next game, at home this Sunday against the Detroit Lions.

EAST RUTHERFORD, New Jersey — After an embarrassing opening-game loss, the Pittsburgh Steelers returned Thursday night to what they know best — intimidating defense — and the result was a 23-17 victory over the New York Jets.

David Woodley, starting four days after suffering a concussion during the Steelers' loss to Kansas City, threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to the rookie Louis Lipps in the first period and then sent Pittsburgh ahead for good with a 3-yard throw to another rookie. Weegie Thompson, in the Gary Anderson hit field goals of 32 and 43 yards in the second period and a 27-yarder in the final quarter to help Pittsburgh defeat the Jets for the eighth time without a loss. The loss spoiled the Jets' first home game in Giants Stadium after 20 years at Shea Stadium in New York.

But it was Pittsburgh's defense that set the stage for the victory. The Steelers held Freeman McNeil to just 30 yards on 12 carries and intercepted three passes. And it was a fumble recovery that set up the Steelers' go-ahead score in the third period.

"I'm very proud of the way we hung in despite a very physical game," said the Steelers' coach. Chuck Noll. "It was blow to blow and we go a lot of guys beat up. The big plays from the younger guys — Louie Lipps, Weegie Thompson and Woodley — made the difference."

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

San Diego Chargers (1-0) at Seattle Seahawks (1-0) — This is a key intradivision match, and one in which the Seahawks find themselves at a tremendous disadvantage. Out for the season is Curt Warner, the AFC's premier running back a year ago and the cor-nerstone of Scattle's offense. His injury prompted the Seahawks to sign Franco Harris. Bear in mind that Harris is a fullback and not the slashing-type runner Warner is. #### INTERCONFERENCE

Buffalo Bills (0-1) at St. Louis Cardinals (0-1) — Perhaps by now it has occurred to the management in St. Louis that the team's fortune rest every so often on the foot of Neil O'Donoughue. It was he who missed three field goals in that overtime game against the Giants last year that ended at 20-20. Last Sunday, he missed a 45-yarder that would have beaten the Packers and would have underscored a fine performance by the quarterback Neil Lomax and a defense that did a good job holding the Packers to 260 yards of passing. The Bills tried everything against the Patriots, in-cluding the use of a 5-3-3 defensive alignment in the second half, which worked well. The Patriots scored all their points in the first 22 minutes. (St. Louis by 7.)

Angeles Rams (0-1) — The Browns did nothing against Seattle last Monday, losing by 33-0. Everything was off, especially the offen-sive line, which allowed Paul Mc-Donald to be sacked seven times. the Rams, whose defensive front is much better than Seattle's. # Mancini-Bogner Bout Is Called Off

NEW ORLEANS (Combined Dispatches) — The scheduled fight Saturday between Ray (Boom Boom) Mancini and Kenny (Bang Bang) Bogner was called off Thursday when Mancini's personal physician ruled that a cut over the left eye of the former World Boxing Association lightweight champion was likely to reopen.

"I think it's quite evident even any light hit is going to open this cut right away." Mancini's physician said. "It looks like a dotted line." He said it would take six weeks for the cut to heal completely.

NHL Black Hawks Let Esposito Go

CHICAGO (AP) — Tony Esposito, the 41-year-old goaltender, will not be invited to the Chicago Black Hawks training camp when it opens Sept. 18, according to Bob Pulford, the team general manager.

"Murray Bannerman has proven he's a good goaltender, and we have to bring along one of the kids, either Warren Skorodenski or Jim Ralph. Pulford said. "Tony has been a great goaltender, but there comes that time in everyone's career.

The veteran National Hockey League goalie said he does not believe the time has come for him to retire. "No sense looking back," Esposito said. "It's over here. Now, I have to decide where I go from here." Esposito thus ends 15 years with the Hawks. He had 15 shutouts and a goals-against average of 2.17 and earned both the Vezina and Calder

Reason for Soviet Pullout Questioned

AHLEN, West Germany (UPI) - West German sports officials peculated Friday that the Soviet Union pulled out of a decathion meet with West Germany because it objected to drug testing.

The West German Athletic Federation announced that a meet scheduled in Ahlen this weekend had been canceled when the Soviet Union declared that four of its athletes were injured. Federation officials and athletes said, however, that they thought the Russians pulled out because they had been informed that drug tests would be mandatory. Earlier this week the Soviet track star Tatyana Kazankina refused to take a drug test after a meet in Paris. International track officials nullified her victory in the 5,000 meters, and will meet in November to discuss what other action, if any, to take.

Peete Leads Golf Event by a Stroke

SUTTON, Massachusetts (UPI) - Calvin Peete overcame swirling winds to shoot a 5-under-par 66 Thursday and take a one-shot lead after the first round of the PGA tournament here. Peete had six birdies and one ogey over the 7,119-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club course.

Alone at 67 was Australian Bob Shearer, No. 119 on the money list, who had seven birdies, a bogey and double bogey. Two strokes back were second-year pro Tom Lehman, who used an accurate putter to overcome difficulties with his swing. Curtis Strange, who carded five birdies and two bogeys, and Gary Pinns, who had five birdies and two bogeys. In Sunningdale, England. Nick Faldo shot a five-under-par 65 to take a one-stroke lead after a round of the European Open Golf Championship on the 6,573-yard Sunningdale Course.

A Woman of Letters: Jeanne Foster and Friends

By Edwin McDowell

New York Timer Service
NEW YORK — The letter is dated Dublin, April 8, 1923, and it begins, Forgive me for typing this but I have pain in my eyes and so must spare them all I can." After reporting that two of his children have recovered from scarlet fever, the author added, "The only tribulation we suffer from civil war is that we are rather weary of being tied to the house."
The letter writer was W. B. Yeats, the Irish poet and playwright. He was writing to Jeanne R. Foster, who would die in 1970 at age 86 in Schenectady, New York, where she spent almost the last 40 years of her life in relative obscurity.

Yet, at the time Yeats wrote to her,

Foster was anything but obscure. Not only was she a renowned beauty, who at age 16 had appeared on the cover of Vanity Fair magazine, but she was also the author of several volumes of poetry and a well-known literary editor. For about two decades she had developed friendships with a wide circle of poets, authors and artists.

The flavor of many of those friendships is apparent from the 14 boxes of Foster letters, diaries, manuscripts and clippings recently acquired by the New York Public Library and housed in its Rare Books and Manuscripts Division.

The collection includes correspondence with Yeats, Ezra Pound and Ford Madox Ford (who in his memoirs described Jeanne Foster as a "ravishingly beautiful lady"); two pages of notes from an interview with James Boyce, during which he gave her a recipe "for an Italian way to cook artichokes," and a diary describing a two-day period in 1921 when, during a trip to Paris, she lunched with Pound, had dinner with the Romanian sculptor Constantin Brancusi and dined with Picasso at a riverside restaurant in Fontainebleau.

From 1910 to 1922. Foster was the literary editor of the Review of Reviews, an influential literary magazine. She became the American editor of the Transatlantic Review, the short-lived journal - founded in Paris in 1924 by Ford Madox Ford—that published Hemingway, Joyce and other promising young writers. Her books of verse include "Rock-Flower" and "Wild Apples," and she wrote two volumes of stories about the Adirondacks.

The biggest single group of letters in the library collection is the 120 written by the father of W. B. Years — John Butler Years, the white-bearded painter and poet who lived for more than a dozen years in New York in a rooming house run by two sisters. Jeanne Foster had made a beeline there, soon after she arrived in New York, to dine at the communal table so that she could hear Yeats expound on matters literary.

"It was said in New York that John

Jeanne R. Foster

Butler Yeats 'revived the lost art of conversation,' ' she wrote years later. "I have never yet heard his equal." They became such good friends that when the elder Yeats died in 1922, he was buried in the Foster family plot in Chestertown, New York, in the foothills of the Adirondacks. Jeanne Foster was even closer friends with John Quinn, an influential corporation lawyer and patron of the arts, whom she met in 1918 at the bedside of the ailing John Butler Yeats. Quinn had defended James Joyce's "Ulysses" in court, he owned the original manuscript of both "Ulysses" and T. S. Eliot's "The Waste Land," and he owned the largest and probably the greatest single collection of modern European art of this century. Jeanne Foster purchased some of that art for him during her travels to Europe with Quinn and on trips

All this time Foster was living with her invalid husband, Matlack Foster, a friend of her family's who was older than her own father and whom she had married on her 17th birthday. He died in 1933.

When Quinn died in 1924, he left Jeanne Foster 14 letters from W. B. Yeats, moreletters from John Butler Yeats and a postcard from James Joyce to Ezra Pound.
All these are in the library collection, along with most of Foster's own correspondent dence. This recent collection is an important companion to the 13-volume John Quinn Memorial Collection in the New York Public Library, which Foster edited and to which she wrote a 5,000-word introduction. Selections from that correspondence appear in "The Man From New York: John Quinn and His Friends" by B. L. Reid (Oxford, 1968).

"Jeanne Foster was not herself a major literary figure, but she was a quite good poet," said William B. Murphy, Thomas Lamont research professor of ancient and modern literature at Union College in Schenectady, and the biographer of John Butler Yeats. "And she was very important on the fringes of literature, because of her own accomplishments and because she was a friend of John Quinn's."

The library collection is officially titled

"I knew Jeanne for 20 years of her life," Murphy said. "As a reward for agreeing to be a Democratic sacrificial lamb in a local election soon after I came to Schenectady in 1948. I was named one of five commissioners on the housing authority, and there was Jeanne Foster. Over the years she began to tell me about J. B. Yeats."

Several years after Quinn's death, Foster moved to the large housein Schenectady that she had bought for her parents almost 20 years earlier with money she earned as a model. There, under the same roof with her husband, mother and father, brother and two sisters, she spent the remainder of her life, working as a counselor for the Schenectady Municipal Housing Authority from 1938 to 1955.

In October 1956, the year after she retired from the housing authority, she wrote to Ezra Pound, who was then in the 10th year of his 12-year confinement in St. Elizabeth's mental hospital in Washington.
"Dear Ezra," she wrote, "This is the long lost and forgotten Jeanne Foster writing. Immured as a social worker to support the various members of my family (now all deceased except one), I was vowed to si-lence. To bring back even to mind the friends and happiness of former years gave me such pain that I wrote no one."

In 1960, Foster was named Schenecta-In 1960, Poster was named Schenectady's senior citizen of the year. She occupied her remaining years as a member of several writers' organizations and environmental groups, and Murphy said she became deeply interested in spiritualism and the occult. The Pound's returned to Italy after Ezra Pound's discharge from St. Elizabeth's, and in 1961 Dorothy Pound wrote to say that her husband was ill in a nursing home. Foster wrote back expressing sympathy and saying that she had donated Ezra's letters to the Houghton Library at Harvard University. "I wish I could see you and Ezra," she added. "The Paris days, those enchanted years, were so wonderful. I have the photograph of Joyce, Quinn, Ford and Ezra in my living room."

By now she was virtually alone, for in 1963 she wrote again to Ezra Pound, saying, "I do not have a living relative; I have outlived them all.

Pound hung on until 1972, when he was 87, leaving behind a reputation as one of the most influential and controversial figures in 20th-century poetry. Jeanne Foster, scarcely remembered, died two years earlier at 86.

She was buried in the Foster family plot, alongside John Butler Yeats, who had gone to his rest almost half a century earlier.
